Fentanyl Facts

OVERVIEW

Fentanyl is 100 TIMES more potent than morphine and 50 TIMES more potent than heroin. The presence of fentanyl in many fake prescription pills has contributed to rapidly increasing rates of teen overdose deaths nationwide. In Florida alone, fentanyl-related overdose deaths among youth increased by 67% from 2020 to 2021.

WHAT IT LOOKS LIKE

Illegal fentanyl can look like powder. This tasteless, odorless substance can be added to fake tablets or mixed with other drugs like heroin or cocaine, often without the user knowing it's there. According to DEA lab testing, six out of 10 fentanyl-laced pills contain a potentially lethal dose of the drug.

DANGERS OF FENTANYL

Fentanyl, similar to other common opioid painkillers, can cause temporary feelings of relaxation or happiness, short-term pain relief, sedation, confusion, drowsiness or dizziness, nausea, vomiting, urinary retention, small pupils, and trouble breathing.

An overdose of fentanyl can cause someone to become very sleepy, have small pupils, cold and clammy skin, skin discoloration, slip into a coma, or have trouble breathing, which can lead to death. If a person shows signs of a coma, pinpoint pupils, and slowed breathing, they might have been poisoned by an opioid.

COMMON NAMES: Apache, Dance Fever, Friend

Despite overall declines in drug use, Fentanyl is contributing to higher teen overdose rates.

Drug dealers add fentanyl to pills that look like common prescription medications such as Xanax, Adderall, and Oxycontin.

HOW TO HELP A FRIEND

It's likely someone you know has considered using drugs or is using. Talking to them could save their life. This isn't a one-size fits all conversation, but here are some tips that may help you get started:

Before You Talk

- DO SOME HOMEWORK. Take a few minutes to learn about the effects of drug and alcohol use.
- RIGHT TIME, RIGHT PLACE. Make sure you have enough time to talk. Choose a place where you both feel comfortable and without a lot of distractions.
- WRITE IT OUT. Having conversations like this can be hard. Taking a few minutes ahead of time to think through and even write out what you're going to say can make a huge difference.

Starting the Conversation

- KEEP IT SIMPLE. Make it a conversation, not a lecture.

"You've got a lot going on right now and I want you to know I'm here for you."

- REALLY LISTEN. Really listening means trying to understand what your friend is going through so you can better support them.

"You've been going through a lot lately. And it sounds like the only way you've been able to deal with all the pressure you're under has been using. Did I get that right?"

- OFFER SUPPORT. Let your friend know you're there for them. Ask them what they think they should do and what help they might be open to.

"Should we talk to your parent or someone else you trust? I know that might seem scary, but I can go with you, if it helps."

It's always a good idea to reach out to a parent, guardian, teacher, or other trusted adult if you have more questions or need to talk.

When fentanyl is added to other drugs, it makes them more powerful, more addictive, and more dangerous.

A fentanyl overdose can happen in seconds or minutes, and lead to respiratory failure and death.
