Addressing Prevention With Your Students

Listen

A student may come to you for advice, or you may notice concerning changes in behavior. Refrain from judgment. Listen, and try to learn more about what's going on.

Talk early and often

Regular conversations about the risks of drugs and alcohol can help. Know your school's prevention plan, and address substance use in different ways throughout the year.

Start with the science

Discuss the mental and physical health impacts of drugs. Focus on the harm substance use can do to academics and relationships.

Practice

Consider taking time to role play various scenarios about coping with stress, what to do if a friend offers you drugs or alcohol, or what to do if a friend needs help.

The Facts. Your Future. is a multifaceted initiative led by Florida's First Lady Casey DeSantis to heighten youth understanding of the dangerous and life-altering effects of substance use.

Fentanyl Facts

OVERVIEW

Fentanyl is an incredibly strong, man-made painkiller approved by the FDA for pain relief and anesthesia. It is about 100 times stronger than morphine and 50 times stronger than heroin. The presence of fentanyl in many fake prescription pills has contributed to rapidly increasing rates of teen overdose deaths.

APPEARANCE

Illegal fentanyl looks like powder. This tasteless, odorless substance can be added to fake tablets or mixed with other drugs like heroin or cocaine, often without the user knowing it's there. According to DEA lab testing, 6 out of 10 fentanyl-laced pills contain a potentially lethal dose of the drug. Legal fentanyl products come in different forms, like "lollipop" lozenges, dissolvable tablets, under-the-tongue tablets, mouth sprays, nasal sprays, skin patches, and injections.

HOW IT'S USED

Fentanyl can be injected, sniffed, smoked, swallowed as a pill, or placed on blotter paper.

Drug dealers add fentanyl to pills that resemble common prescription medications such as Xanax, Adderall, and Oxycontin.

Fentanyl is contributing to higher teen overdose rates, despite overall declines in drug use.

MIND & BODY EFFECTS

Fentanyl, similar to other common opioid painkillers, produces effects such as relaxation, euphoria, pain relief, sedation, confusion, drowsiness, dizziness, nausea, vomiting, urinary retention, small pupils, and respiratory depression.

An overdose of illegal fentanyl can cause someone to become very sleepy, have small pupils, cold and clammy skin, skin discoloration, slip into a coma, or have trouble breathing, which can lead to death. If a person shows signs of a coma, pinpoint pupils, and slowed breathing, they might have been poisoned by an opioid.

When fentanyl is added to other drugs, it makes them more powerful, more addictive, and more dangerous.

Teachers should incorporate the facts about fentanyl into substance use and abuse education materials, and when possible, encourage parents and caregivers to talk with teens about the risks of fentanyl.
